RETURN TO THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WALL

By Baron Jonathan Blackbow

Last month I was at Pennsic as it tottered to an end
No luck this year, I hadn't found the other side again
I came on home, in an okay mood, but still, I missed them all
The friends I'd left there, years gone by, on the other side of the wall.
Came home, unpacked, went on with life, and to them drank a toast
The friends I missed, gone on ahead, missed all of them the most.
What had I done? Why weren't they there? It surely seemed to me
That I was alone in this world again, a rotten place to be.
I sat on my porch at midnight alone, missing them one and all,
When in the woods nearby my house, a campfire grew strong and tall.
What's this? I thought. It can't be them, they only come once a year
And in one place, at a site well loved, to bring us love and cheer.
To the woods I went, quite confused of course, but this would be just like them
To play a trick, to show up late, and party harder then.
And there they were, the lot of them, sitting and waiting for me
But they weren't alone, no, not this year, a lot more there to see.
There's Simba, and Sunday, and Oscar, and Blert, and Gizmo, and Gabby too,
And Jedi, and Puffin, and Emmy, countless more, being petted, and being a zoo.
They were there, every one, all the pets that we'd lost, all happy, and cheerful, and fed,
And playing, and running, getting all in the way, or using a lap for a bed.
And there's Kane again, and Arielle too, both smiling and giving a hug
She's laughing a bit, and Kane, well, you know, he's standing there just looking smug.
"We cheated a bit, this year, you can tell, got a two for one kind of a deal
We knew that you missed them, the furry little brats, so we put down some fish and some veal
And what do you know, there it was, big and bright, the Rainbow Bridge with all of them there
They were waiting for you guys, a lot more just this year, so this party's all full of pet hair.
But you know what?" He grinned, and he said with a smirk, that lit up the whole of his face,
"On this side of the wall, nobody's allergic, so we let them all in, with good grace."
I cried, because reasons, for what seemed like forever, and Kane and Arielle watched
Got it out of my system, and then went and played, and petted, and hugged until dawn.
And they faded out slowly, and I waved goodbye, and was sad, till one of them said
"death is nothing at all, doesn't count, I'm right here, say my name, pat me right on the head;
I am waiting for you, out of sight, round the corner, all is well, feed me tuna and cheese,
We will both carry on, I love you, you know, so at least don't cry, quite so much, please."
And I laughed then, and waved, and they faded out for this year, friends and pets, gone to wait for me, all;
And I'll see them again, and again, and again, till I go to that side of the Wall.
-With Apologies to Henry-Scott Holland for stealing bits of his masterpiece
